But Greece and her foundations are
Built below the tide of war,
Throned on the crystalline sea
Of thought and its eternity.

DEDICATION

WILLIAM CASTELLUCCIO

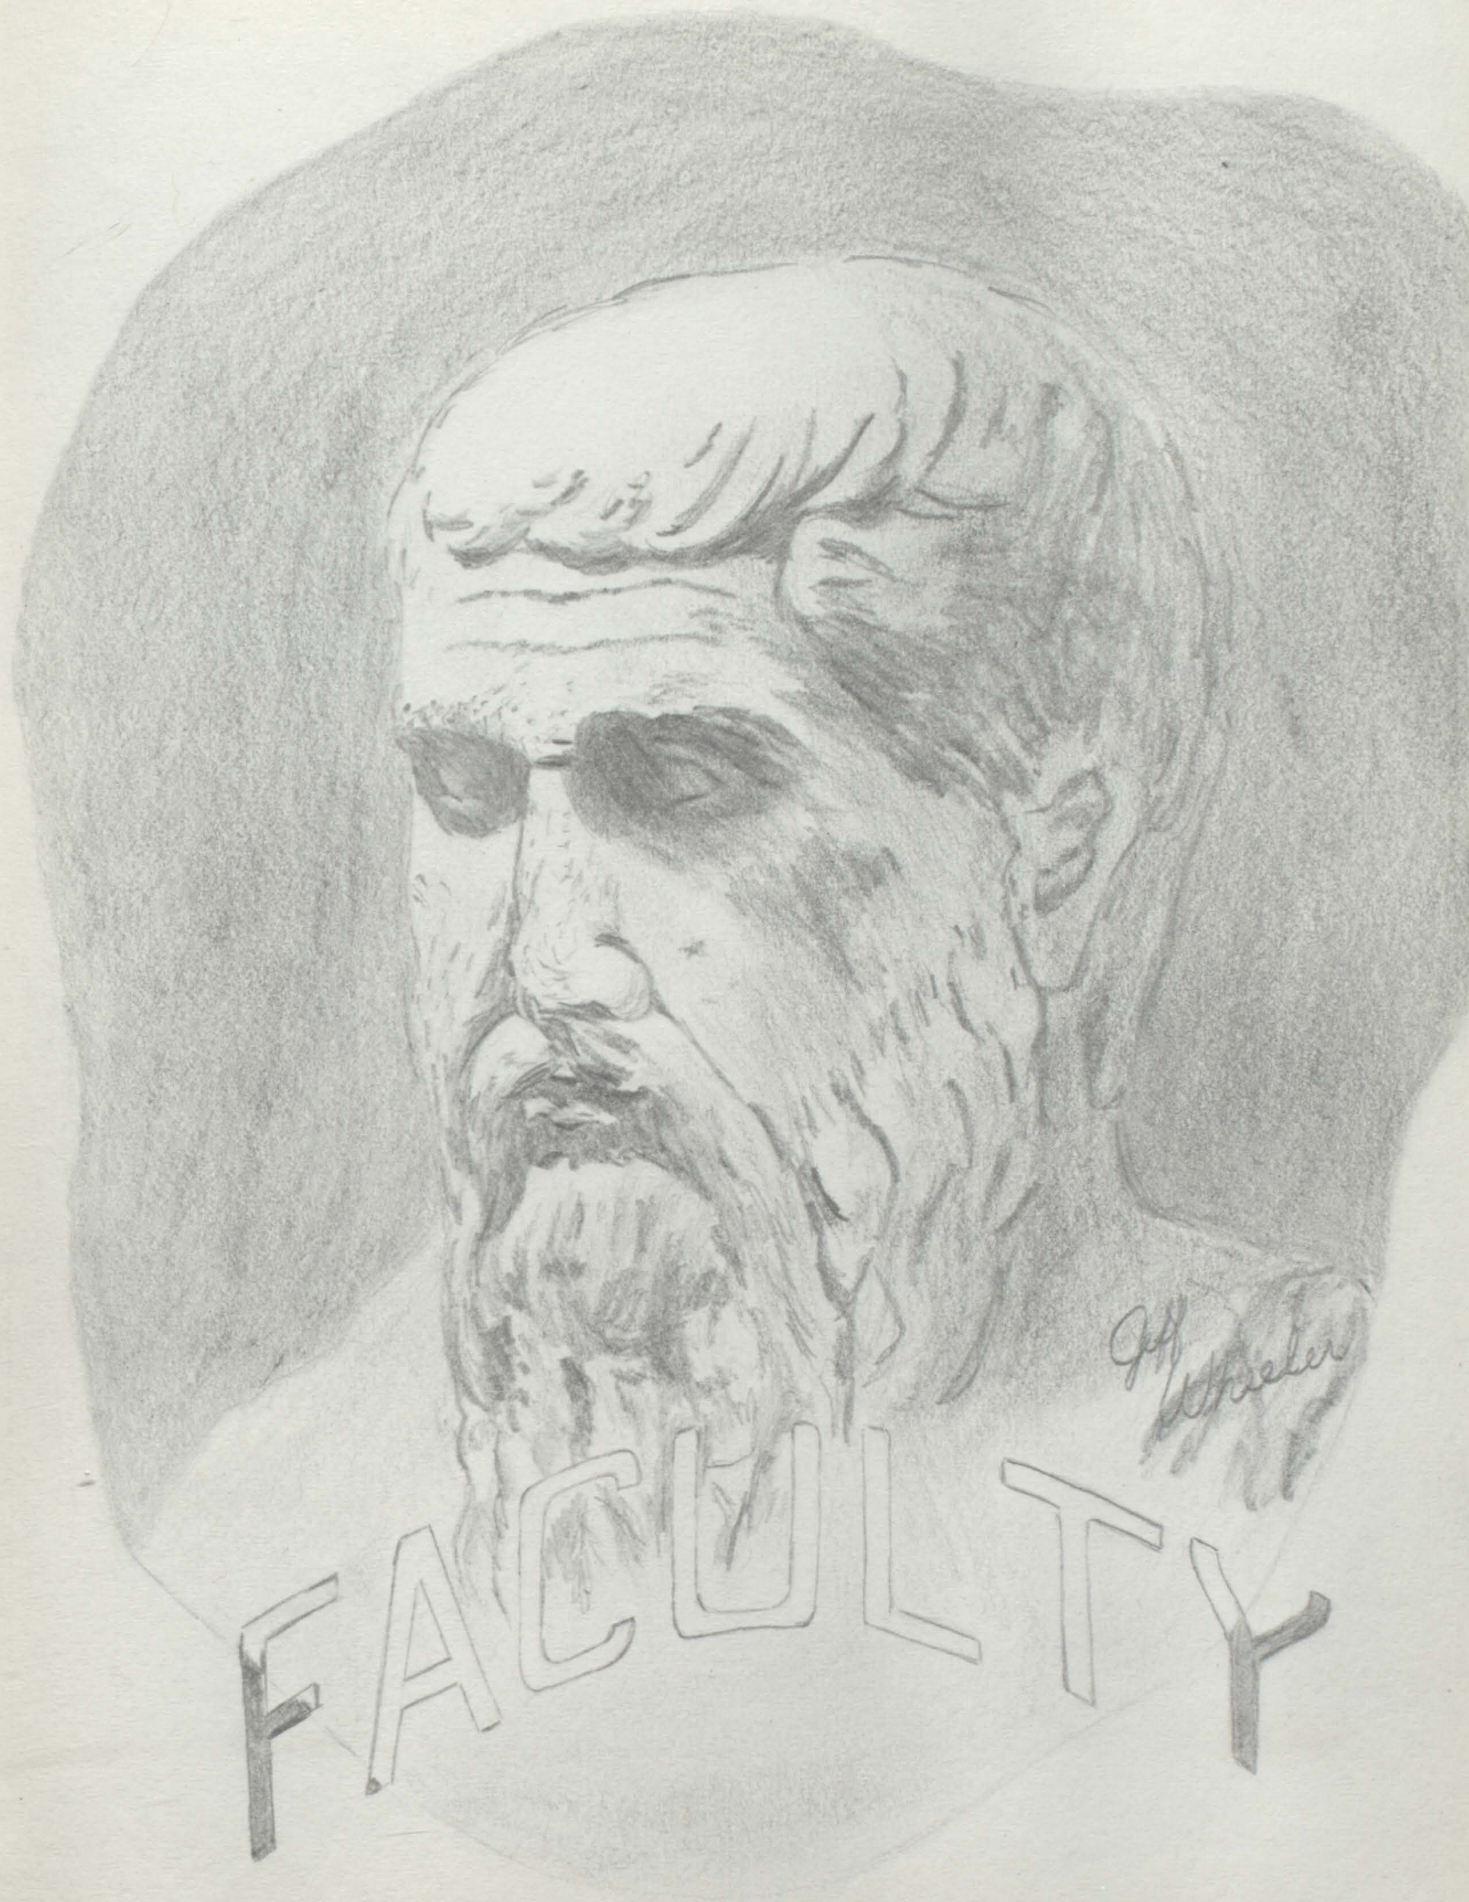

This year, as in the past, we dedicate our yearbook to a faculty member whom we deem to be dedicated to the ideals of teaching.

We are proud to announce that the Senior Class has chosen Mr. William Castelluccio for this honor.

The Sciences have long been the nemesis of many a student, Chemistry heading the list, but with the expert guidance and 'after hours' aid unselfishly given by Mr. Castelluccio many students have gained an insight into the intricacies of this subject.

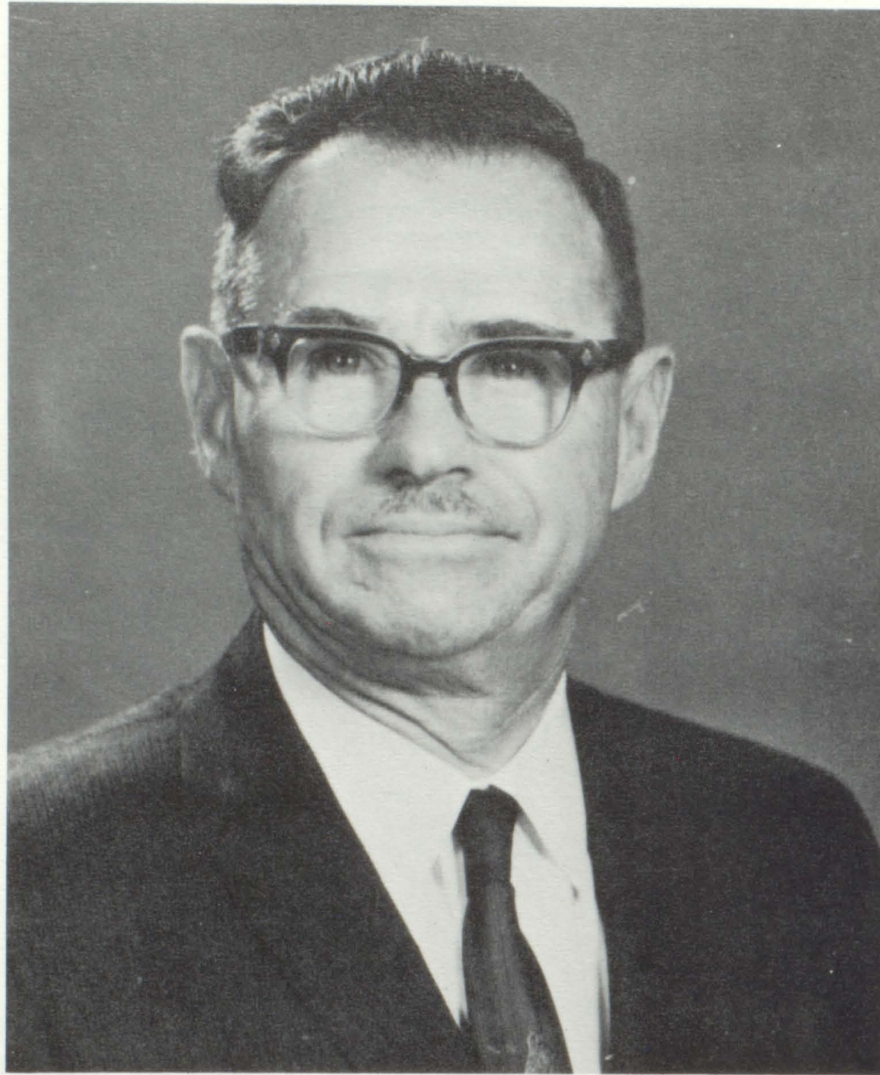

The patience, concern, and kindness perpetually displayed by Mr. Castelluccio serve as examples of true devotion to the teaching profession for students and teachers alike.

"Mr. C", in fondest appreciation, we salute you; your warmth and generosity will not soon be forgotten.

HISTORY OF THE OLYMPICS

Greek Culture has enriched civilizations through the ages by its contributions to Philosophy, the Sciences, and Politics, but it is of another contribution that we now speak; The Olympics.

The ancient games, held in the Olympia Valley, were celebrated every four years from 776 B.C. to 393 A.D., when the "pagan festival" was suppressed by the zeal of a Christian Emperor. The Games took precedence over all other matters and during times of war a "Sacred Truce" was recognized and honored by all warring parties. No greater honor could be bestowed than an Olympic victory. Shrines were built, homage paid, and a wreath of laurel given to the winners signifying their victory.

The Olympic Games were a living sign of the value the Greeks attached to the body. Once more this typifies their characteristic emphasis on harmony. Men have bodies as well as minds, and both must be disciplined. The thinkers of Greece were not ivory-tower intellectuals.

"Go ahead, but I still say the office sent me!"

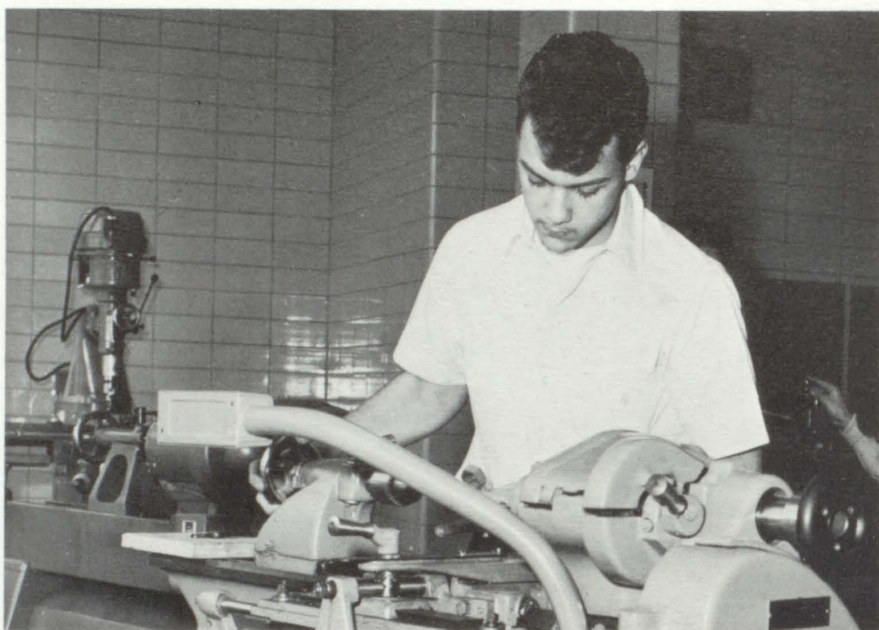

"But why can't we dedicate our Year-book to Soupy Sales?"

"Wait until he drinks this one."

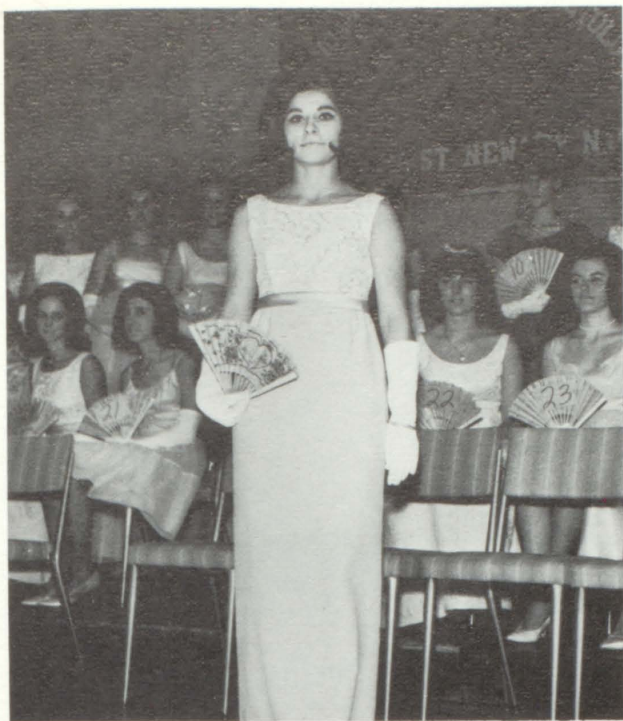

"But what I told you to draw doesn't have curves!"

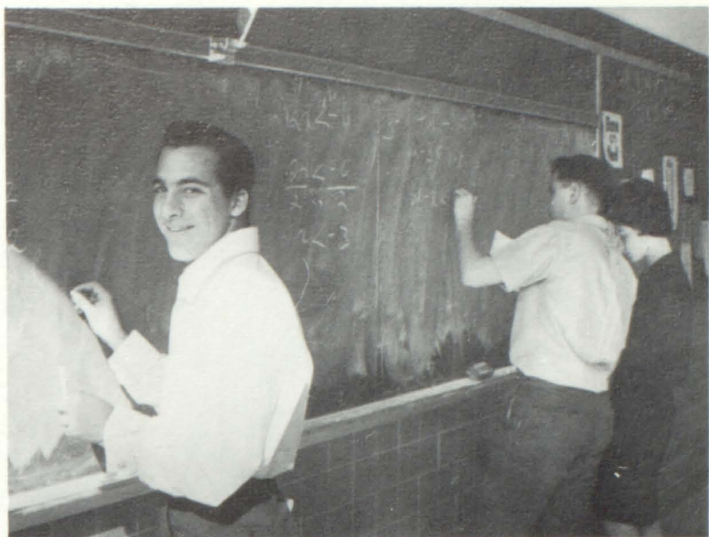

... and after Daytona, who knows?

"Ha ha, this will fix them!"

Mary Jo Venieri: Entrant Miss High School of New Jersey.

Ha! Ha! He thinks I know what I'm doing.

No kidding?—Soupy Sales was taken off T.V. for a week?

After the table, do the floor.

After I fix it he'll never know the difference.

What was in that punch?

So what, it's only a little drip.

Wonder what color this will make.

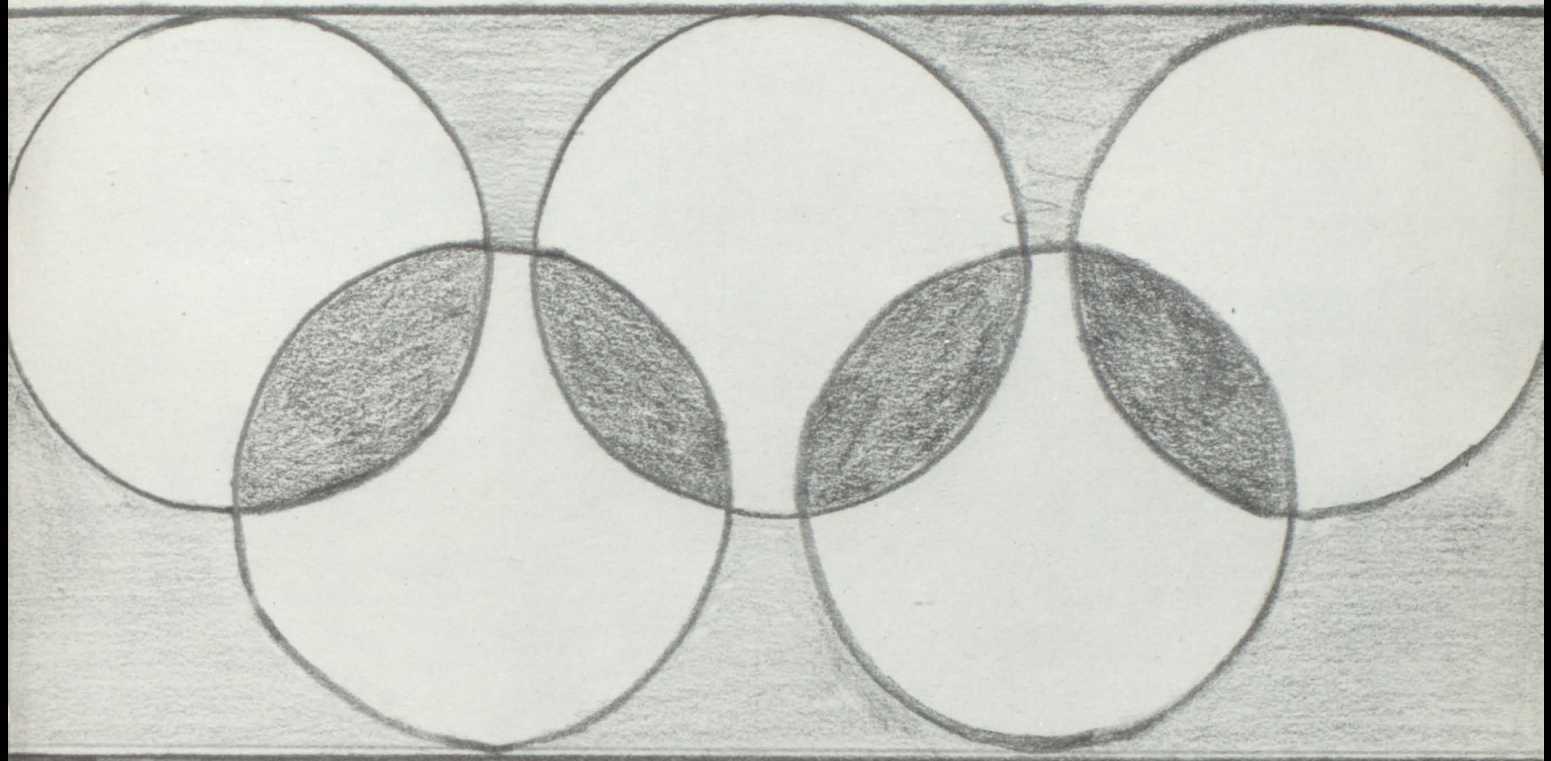

Oh, why can't we put that in the Yearbook, Mrs. B.?

Who says I can't cook?

Psst! Mr. Kaplonski is coming.
